Ola, Uber, Rapido fares will now surge 2x: All you need to know

New guidelines allow ride-hailing apps to double fares during peak hours, introduce cancellation penalties and mandate driver insurance.

Taking a calibrated approach to balance commuter costs and driver earnings, the government has updated the rules for ride-hailing platforms like Ola, Uber and Rapido. As per the Motor Vehicle Aggregator Guidelines (MVAG) 2025, released Tuesday by the Ministry of Road Transport and Highways, platforms can now charge up to twice the base fare during peak hours. Earlier, the cap was set at 1.5 times the base fare.
